EDEN STILL IN STRAITS

Stamps of 'Amateurism' on All Phases of British Life

By GEORGE LICHTEIN

LONDON. — After-effects of the post-war situation continue to make themselves felt in the political arena. The Conservative Government, which was elected in 1951, has been unable to achieve its aims in the Middle East, and its policy in the East has been a failure.

Most observers — including those at the Conservative Central Office — were indeed beginning to feel that the Government's downfall, but the prospect was not taken too seriously; the pendulum has swung before, and it always manages to swing back. What is happening now is of a different order: it begins to seem possible that Conservatism will really lose its hold over the country if things go on as they have been doing.

"The Times" put the issue with unaccustomed bluntness on December 14, when in an editorial it tacitly headlined "No Time For Fumbling". It welcomed Sir Anthony Eden back from Jamaica with a string of harsh truths culminating in the following ominous warning:

"Either Sir Anthony Eden must show that he can and will lead a serious, progressive Government, or the strain that has been put upon the Conservative Party by the Times is too grave and the Conservative position is too hazardous for a leader of the Conservative Party to continue to lead it."

There are harsh words, for the luckless Balfour Government of those days — as every Conservative over the age of 75 remembers with shudder — was followed by the Liberal landslide of 1905, which opened the way for Lloyd George and his for those days ruthless tax proposals which raised income tax to the monstrous height of almost a shilling in the pound (it is now close to eight). The comparison with the probable advent of another Weismann has already been drawn — except that for the moment it is now close to eight. The comparison with the probable advent of another Weismann has already been drawn — except that for the moment it is now close to eight.

Broad Hints

"The Times" is not alone in having made its position clear. In more obvious terms "The Economist" has done the same and even the "Telegraph" has uttered a broad hint. ("It was to such considerations, for example, that Mr. Neville Chamberlain bowed in May 1940, even though disquiet in the Conservative ranks had not destroyed his parliamentary majority.")

GAZA IS OURS

Editor, The Jerusalem Post Sir, — The rumours set afoot by sundry "spokesmen" of ours are most disturbing. Politically speaking, I would express the opinion that Israel should have learned by now that to trust the U.N. to protect her in the event of a breach of the armistice is a fool's errand. Jerusalem, at least, will never forget this. However, as regards Sinai, I have stated before that I would not expend the life of a single soldier in the effort to hold on to it one moment longer than the political and/or the security exigencies of the situation demand.

INCOME TAX

Editor, The Jerusalem Post Sir, — According to the proposals for reform of the Income Tax Ordinance, I find that persons who are the sole supporters of their parents may deduct only £120 for each parent.

ECONOMIZING

Editor, The Jerusalem Post Sir, — At a time when there is such a need to conserve, what justification is there for government officials to use the cars at their disposal, or to hire taxis for the transport of members of their staff to and from their offices during hours when the public transport system is available? Should not these very offices be the first to set an example for the citizens of Israel, who are being called upon to contribute in so many ways to the national emergency?

PRISON SENTENCE

Editor, The Jerusalem Post Sir, — I was shocked to read, in your issue of December 17, that a man of 18 had been sentenced to a life term.

Two things are novel about these comments: the bluntness with which the personal issues are being put by responsible journalists, and the fact that the Government, which is supposed to be the voice of the people, is being called to account for its actions.

The manner in which "The Times" has lately discussed the leading figures of the Government almost recalls its treatment of an incompetent ruling aristocracy during the Crimean War, almost exactly a century ago, when a predominantly middle-class electorate, through the medium of its daily organs, told a predominantly aristocratic Parliament what it thought of its inefficiency in high places.

Sir William Speaks

The present Editor of "The Times" is a Jew, and a school at 15 and worked his way up from telephone clerk to the most important editorial chair in the land, presumably knows what is doing in this touching up of the raw and exposed nerves of the Tory Government which his paper nominally supports.

Sir William Speaks has a reputation for forthrightness. More important, he is not uncritical of the standards of the "Establishment." His background, in fact, is Manchester, and he is a vigorous, progressive, efficient government which is just what the Eden Administration is unable to provide.

The answer must inevitably displease people who are hurt by a realistic analysis of what is British politics at the present time. For it suggests that there is something dreadfully wrong with "the Establishment," this being the polite code term for the post-war ruling oligarchy (which includes a number of nominal Liberals and Socialists).

Loaded Questions

The something that is wrong can perhaps best be summed up by a realistic analysis of what is British politics at the present time. For it suggests that there is something dreadfully wrong with "the Establishment," this being the polite code term for the post-war ruling oligarchy (which includes a number of nominal Liberals and Socialists).

How is it that a self-confessed juvenile prankster such as Mr. Colin Wilson was able to palm off a mass of potted rubbish ("The Outsider") on includes Misha Asherov and Avraham Nino and two Yemenite actresses, one of whom is making her first appearance in the theatre.

Robins. The supporting cast

Under the direction of Yosi Zilberg, the Habimah players are transformed into black and white mice as the allegory unfolds on the conflict of East and West. The play is set in a pub, the set designed by Dr. Paul Levy. Leading roles are played by Raphael Klatzkin and Tamar

Two of the Stars of "Black and White," Raphael Klatzkin and Misha Asherov, awarded the recipients of the Moshe Hershman Prize, awarded them last week for outstanding acting in separate plays.

Haifa Film Club Views Classic

SEEKING Ford's masterpiece, "Grapes of Wrath," 17 years later at Haifa Film Club, one is almost glad that his first version was toned down for performance, because even as we have it, the human appeal is so strong, the nerves. Human dignity is portrayed in the face of every humiliation from the road fairs, evicted from his farm, trudge Westward in search of a new home. The artistic level is maintained by the emphasis on only essential details of this Odyssey, by the continuing close-ups of the Mother who holds the family together and
